Go to PsychINFO and find one article that is in our library that you believe violates the APA ethical guidelines. Bring the article to class to present. You should describe the article and be able to indicate the guidelines violated by the research article.

General Guidelines:
- We will apply current guidelines. Recognize that there are not guidelines before the early 1970's and they have changed over time. So while from our perspective the study may violate guidelines, it is possible that at the time, the study was ethically permissible.
- Recognize the difference between your personal morals and the general standards of research ethics.
- Cite the particular guidelines you think are being violated.
- There are other guidelines out there. The NIH in particular but we will not use them for the time being.

Out of bounds studies
- All of the Milgram Obedience Study
- The Stanford Prison Experiment
- The Urinal Studies